Dennis William SULLIVAN III and Mary Agnes KESSLER were married in Oct 1883. The Sullivans moved to LeRoy Township, SD, in March, 1884. They settled on land northwest of Madison that was later farmed by their son, Clarence Sullivan. He farmed there until 1917, when they moved to Madison - where they lived until their deaths. (Mary's letters indicate 2 boys before Joseph died in a house fire). Dennis was listed as a farmer in the 1900 census. In the 1920 census, Dennis and Mary are listed as living alone in Lake Co, Madison City, SD. Neither are employed. Dennis died June 4, 1952, at the age of 95, in Madison, SD, at the home of his daughter Mrs. Alex Koscki.

In 1861, the Dakotas were made into their own territory. In 1876, Custer's forces were destroyed at the Little Big Horn in eastern Montana. The Indian reservation period began in the 1880s. In 1889 the Sioux gave up half of the The Great Sioux Reservation. The Great Dakota Boom took place between 1878 and 1887. From 1870 to 1880 the population of the southeastern part of the territory increased from 10,000 to 82,000. By 1885, the area had 250,000 inhabitants.

In 1883, the Sullivans moved from Dubuque to Lake Co, South Dakota territory six years before it became a state. It was not until 1890 that Sitting Bull was killed at Wounded Knee 240 miles west of Madison.

Life in the Dakotas was not easy. Grasshoppers destroyed crops in 1936; drought occurred in 1889, 1894, and 1910-1911; dust storms occurred in 1933 and 1934; thousands of farms and merchants were left destitute by several economic depressions - the worst being the Great Depression of the 1930s.
